This exhibition's three artists blur the boundaries between figuration and abstraction in thrilling new ways. Ann Tarantino's performative "breath portraits" involve the artist blowing ink through a straw and embellishing the blobs with paint, resulting in creeping, plantlike forms; Christian Rieben's large-scale paintings suggest mysterious psychological landscapes with a wicked sense of humor (one piece in particular, Ass-Fixated, looks like a giant, blooming mum, but the title suggests other possible interpretations); and Dominick Garritano's bombastic, lushly brushed painting resembles a series of small, mosaic-like collages of geometric shapes and playful, vivid color. VBS is like TV. Except for the part where it's great and TV is awful. VBS is an online broadcast network. We stream Flash video, free of charge and 24 hours a day. We carry a dizzying mix of domestic and international news, pop and underground culture coverage, the coolest music in the world and user-generated content. www.VBS.tv.
