

Ginny Fox is a native New Yorker who has exhibited in numerous venues throughout the U.S. Her work is included in many private collections throughout the country. She is currently represented by the Carrie Haddad Gallery in Hudson, NY.

After many years living in the Bronx, she recently moved back to the Upper West Side of Manhattan, where the confluence of the Hudson River, its rocky environs, and multiple architectural structures has become a renewed source of inspiration. Her studio in Yonkers, N.Y. is in a turn of the century carpet mill overlooking hills and industrial complexes, another locale containing the merging of elements so integral to her work.
