#XTRA LAYER

Cheryl Donegan's EXTRA LAYER is a collection of outerwear commissioned by the New Museum that advances her foray into fashion. Produced in cooperation with Print All Over Me and styled with accessories sourced from eBay, her personal collection and the model's own clothing, the project extends Donegan's exploration of the consumption and production of forms taken from mass culture, middlebrow design, and art history.

EXTRA LAYER draws inspiration from "the tuxedo T-shirt, a trompe l'oeil of one type of formal garment on top of a very casual garment, and also Maison Margiela, which did a sequined gown printed on a simple dress," Donegan says. "I've always really admired those two for the visual wit and the sort of pun, and even the notion of the garment as a layer, a changing skin."
