One Mark to the Next

March 4 – March 25, 2011

Opening Reception Friday, March 4th | 7 – 11pm | Free

Drift Station Gallery proudly presents One Mark to the Next, a group exhibition of works on paper, installations and sculptures curated by Angeles Cossio.

The works included in the exhibition were not made to complete a pre-determined plan but set out to “see what happens” and left themselves open to multiple configurations and possibilities. They embody an attitude of exploration and responsiveness to both the world and the artist’s own internal workings.

The works included in One Mark to the Next were made in response to pre-existing marks on the page or in collaboration with biological or emotional processes. One artist collaborates with tress moving in the wind, another with mapping her own set of worries and concerns. Others rely on repetitive patterning to build up the surface of the drawing, while others tease out line into lyrical sculptures and installations. Simple intuitive gestures build upon one another to create works that are full of richness and complexity.

Started by Angeles Cossio and Jeff Thompson in the summer of 2010, Drift Station acts as a non-traditional curatorial platform for innovative exhibitions, art, music, and performance based in Lincoln, Nebraska, USA.
